REPORT OF THE BURKE MANIERI FIGHT, BY THE TIMES-PIYAYUNE

The following report of the Burke-Manieri fight, in New Orleans Monday night, is used by The Echo for the reason that while not entirely correct in its version of the affair, the Times-Picayune account is the best over the other daily papers, and is not so prejudiced to an outsider, and willing to give credit where credit is due. The account follows:

Defeat staring him in the face, and with a worried look on his face, the young fighter, Russell Manieri, of New Orleans, stood in the center of the ring, waiting for the referee to stop the fight. The referee, a man in a white shirt and dark trousers, stood in the center of the ring, looking at the two fighters. The crowd, which filled the arena, was silent, waiting for the referee's decision. The referee, after a moment's pause, stepped forward and declared the fight over. The crowd erupted in a roar of applause, and the referee stepped back, looking at the two fighters. The fight had been a hard one, and the referee's decision was a surprise to many of the crowd. The fight had been a hard one, and the referee's decision was a surprise to many of the crowd.

Nearly a thousand fans from points along the Gulf Coast—Bay St. Louis, Gulfport, Biloxi and all other points in the Howard street arena to see "Dad" Manieri's widely-advertised fight heavy-weight in his first, big bout, and then disappointed, again disappointed, but satisfied their champion had met defeat in the right way. It easily was the biggest crowd that ever jammed itself—or rather, tried to jam itself—in the Tulane A. O. Club, where the fight was held. Even the "staircase room only" sign was taken down and it was found impossible to squeeze another man into the arena to a place of vantage. And while it lasted the fight was well worth seeing. Manieri exceeded even the fondest expectations of his own fellow townsmen, who for weeks have watched "Dad" Manieri condition his son at the Bay camp.

Yes, when the fight turned into the sixth round, Manieri looked like a well beaten fighter, and the sharpshooters who had laid 200 bets on him began to frantically try to hedge off some of their money. For five rounds Manieri had fought as he always fought—had depended on his skill, his left jab and hook, foot work and like grip in the clinches—and had himself going by the boards.

In the sturdy youth from the Bay, Burke found a rival who could duck his leads at long range, block his leads at short range, outfight him in the clinches, gubbit him in boxing and generally land cleaner blows and beat Burke to the majority of the leads. Verily, Manieri seemed tougher than his advances notices said.

After warming up in the first two rounds and feeling Burke out, Manieri settled to his work like a veteran gladiator, instead of the inexperienced 20-year-old youngster he is. And in the third, fourth and fifth, he chased Burke about the ring and battered him so soundly that many of Burke's supporters began to grow lukewarm in their shouts of encouragement, and a few of them derisively shouted: "Right, Burke, don't run."

The end of the fifth round found Manieri's long legs carrying him unsteadily back to his corner. His right eye was cut, his nose bruised and his whole appearance seemed that of a man who was in trouble and didn't know exactly how to go about getting out of it.

Manieri had socked in many a heavy left hook to the body, but Burke with many another left and right to the head, and was evading after the tall young Irishman as confidently as if victory for himself was a foregone conclusion. Then came the sixth round, and Manieri also won by a shake. But it marked the beginning of the end, for in that round Burke, for the first time in his young life, found out he could fight.

they broke he madly rushed in at the unexpected, and the fight under straight rules, where each must protect himself at all times, would have been unfair. They were in a fast exchange at the bell.

Angered and with a revengeful look on his set face, Burke bore down upon his lanky antagonist at the start of the eighth. They swapped ineffective blows, each bleeding a little for a minute or so the advantage was first one way or the other, but with Burke fighting harder and harder with every rush.

THE FATEFUL WALL-OP.
Finally as Burke stepped back out of a clinch, Manieri rushed in, his hands held up in front of his face for protection. Then he shot a left, uncovers the left of his face. Almost like a streak, the extraordinarily long right arm of Burke's 140 pounds behind it. It was straight and true, and caught Manieri flush on the jaw, and the young fighter's head snapped back. The referee, who had been watching the fight, stepped forward and declared the fight over. The crowd erupted in a roar of applause, and the referee stepped back, looking at the two fighters. The fight had been a hard one, and the referee's decision was a surprise to many of the crowd.

Burke jumped on him, fiercely, and in the ninth, and in few seconds, Manieri was again groaning, blindly, only worse than before. A Burke was about to send home a left hook, Wambegans stepped in, between them, caught the blow, and Burke back and elevated Manieri's lean arm in token of victory.

HAPPINESS SORROW.
A mighty shout went up from the Burke faction. While the Gulf Coast, just as Burke and Manieri had been grinning sadly and looking at each other, of course there was talk of Burke's fall having lots to do with his defeat. Undoubtedly, he was hurt in the temple. But in the writer's opinion, he was a beaten boy.

And now a word for Russ Manieri. The Times-Picayune, which was the first to comment on the fight, contained the following, very complimentary indeed to our young Bay St. Louis athlete:

Being "popular in defeat" is a word in these days for any scrap, and in this case, it is almost a necessity to keep Burke in the flow of coin is to be maintained, yet Russell Manieri lost no follow-up when he was stopped Monday night in the ninth round by Martin Burke.

Burke's long tour with Jack Dempsey, his many bouts and his well-arranged campaign of fights brought Burke up to a place where he could almost be considered a seasoned fighter compared with Manieri. Manieri, an unsophisticated youth barely out of his teens, had been developed, you might say, in a correspondence school, in practical experience was nil, and practical experience is second cousin to everything.

Manieri must have been woefully inexperienced to stop fighting even slightly lower his guard, take his eyes off Burke and converse with the referee as he did Monday night in the seventh round. A man who had fought would have realized that under the "protect-yourself-at-all-times" rule he was putting himself open to attack, and if Manieri had known that, he never would have allowed those two damaging blows which made him believe, furnished the real turning point in the fight.

Burke, quick as a flash, jumped in and smote the unthinking lad, heavily in the stomach, and then brought a vicious left hook to the jaw, shooting his right home just a moment behind.

RUSSELL MANIERI IS THE PRIDE OF HOME GETS NATIONAL OF AND FRIENDS AWAY. FICE OF TREASURER

His Formal Entry into the Professional Arena Monday Night Was Marked By Fine Showing.

It was a representative crowd of the popularity and esteem in which our young townsmen, Russell Manieri, is held, and worthy of the splendid fight put up by this athlete. While he did not get the decision on paper, he won the admiration and applause of all lovers of clean sports, for he put up a splendid fight and demonstrated the mettle of which he is made.

Sporting writers, the fellows who pour out the daily dross for the sport page of metropolitan newspapers, and who analyze the game from every angle, give Manieri generous praise. They wonder at his grit in making his professional debut with one older and more experienced fighter, and they say he should have boxed with one of lesser ability and experience than Burke, seasoned from longer, and more familiarization with the game.

"For," said one, "Burke has gone the rounds with Dempsey; he has vast experience with professionals, an advantage of superior height over Manieri." But Manieri has not lost on the contrary, the manager of the Tulane Athletic Club, the scene of Monday night's fight, is willing for him to come back, and says he will prove a good drawing card.

Bay St. Louis, as well as the towns along the Gulf Coast, are just proud of Russell Manieri, and he is not only a hero to the people, but a source of pride to the community. The Echo, voicing the sentiment of the community, is very proud of its young fighter and townsmen, Russell Manieri, and we wish to extend the hand of congratulation to him as an athlete on the occasion of his formal entrance into the professional arena.

Miss Susie Briggs is preparing to enter Newcomb College, New Orleans, for a two-year special course of study.

Mr. and I. M. Lichtenstein send greetings to Bay St. Louis from Lake Umbagog, Maine, here they are spending a while.

Wm. C. Sick has been appointed local oyster inspector by the board of Oyster Commissioners, succeeding Mr. Walker McDonald, who was not an applicant for re-appointment.

Mr. E. C. Weston, of Logtown, has resumed his studies at S. S. C. and his sister, Mrs. McNeill, will return next week to Behaven College, at Jackson, Miss.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Wisner are enjoying their stay at Asheville, N. C. They are registered at the Park Grove Inn, one of the fashionable and most exclusive resort hotels in America.

To-day's Bass Christian Beacon says: "Quite a number of sports from the Pass joined those from other coast points in attending the fight on Monday night in New Orleans between Russell Manieri, of Bay St. Louis, and Martin Burke, of New Orleans, when the latter was stopped in the ninth round, the coast boy being technically knocked out, but not until he had put up a game battle. The contest was pronounced one of the best scraps ever taken place in New Orleans, and it is probable that another match will be made again."

When hearing Burke down as he was doing in the fifth and sixth rounds, and could have won the decision, "Dad" Manieri undoubtedly would have brought to the ring the most popular boxer that ever crawled through the ropes in a Dixie arena. It isn't too late now for Manieri to be substituted in lack of experience. That quality then, is what several weeks, he should be put in the hands of a regular trainer, fighters and started again, this time against an opponent less formidable than Martin Burke proved. Frank Forest, match-maker of the Tulane Club, said nothing would please him better than to see Manieri back.

THE MONROE CAR IS LATEST TO REACH BAY ST. LOUIS.

Beautiful Medium-Priced Car Has Arrived at Schneider's Garage and Will Be Demonstrated.

The Monroe car has arrived! And it is a beauty. After investigating the merits of seven different makes of automobiles before taking the agency, Karl Schneider, proprietor of Schneider's Garage, decided on the Monroe as the best for the money and the best of all.

I have been wanting to take the agency for a medium-priced car for quite a while," said Mr. Schneider, and it has been quite a task to find something that would stand the test to which I put a car and give my patrons satisfaction.

People do not buy automobiles every day," continued Mr. Schneider. "But their good money into a car and they want value received. In finally selecting the Monroe I feel I have purchased the best car, and I am now ready to give demonstrations."

So thoroughly did Mr. Schneider investigate the merits of the Monroe car and so certain is he of the desirability of the car that he has purchased a carload. These will be here in a few days. He received a demonstration car during the week, which is already partially sold. There is no doubt the Monroe is an exceptionally good car, with features found only on the high priced cars. It stacks up handsomely and at once wins favor of all who see it. It is needless to say quite a lot will be sold here; the popularity of the Monroe is assured. See advertisement in another column of The Echo. Mr. Schneider invites inspection; free demonstration.

Airships for Commercial Use

British Experts Agree That It Is to the Craft of Rigid Construction We Must Look for Usefulness in Business

British experts, seeking to forecast the future potentialities of airships, seem to agree that it is to the airship of rigid construction, not to the airship, that one must look for the maximum of commercial usefulness, writes a foreign correspondent of the Ohio State Journal.

The limitations of airships designed on present principles are definitely known. Technically it is an accepted fact that an airplane cannot be produced which is capable of transporting a commercially adequate load for a longer nonstop flight than 1,000 miles. For practical purposes 500 to 800 miles are regarded as the workable limits.

But the prospects of airships are much less easy to diagnose. It is recognized that rigid airships can fly for distances of 2,500 miles carrying a commercial load of approximately fifteen tons, and that they are enabled to undertake long flights now believed to be impossible of attainment by airplanes.

Every increase in the size of airships is accompanied by greater relative efficiency, but the medium-sized airships have greater advantages, it is generally supposed. For example the "North Sea" class of 200-horse power is capable of transporting a load of more than three tons, whereas the four-engine giant airplane of 1,100-horse power is able to lift less than four tons and burns twice as much gasoline.

Deadly Mosquito

Female Does All Deadly Work of Fever Propagation

The male mosquito does not bite; his bill is so blunt that he could not be a bloodsucker if he wished. It is the female mosquito that does all the deadly work of fever propagation, according to a writer in the Scientific American.

In the autumn the males die, and the females seek winter quarters. They hibernate in dark corners of cellar and garret, and on the first warm day of spring are out laying their eggs. Save when extended by the arrival of this hibernating period, the life of the female is one or two months; the male, on the other hand, lives but a few days. The food of the mosquito is the juice and nectar of plants and, of course, blood. Though not necessarily that of man, animals, reptiles and even caterpillars are bitten with the same freedom.

The female mosquito lays from 50 to 100 eggs at a time, on any quiet bit of water. In about three days they hatch, and though at first the larvae are very small, they grow rapidly and attain full development in a few days. We have then the familiar wigglers of the old-time rain barrel and the uncoveted cistern.

During the larval stage, which lasts from seven to fourteen days, the mature variety can be distinguished from all others by the obviously inflexible, by virtue of the fact that it lies with its body parallel to the surface of the water while the other species hang with their heads downward.

Bamboo Needle of the Phonograph—Process—Wood Must Go Through

It was F. D. Hall of Chicago, who discovered the bamboo needle of the phonograph. The Scientific American relates the many ways with which he experimented before he found the right one and describes the intricate processes that the bamboo goes through before becoming a needle.

The final point of the needle is formed from the engineered portion of the cane. The poles, 20 feet long and from 2 1/2 to 3 1/2 inches in diameter, are carefully selected, are sawed into pieces about an inch long and split in two. Machines split these again into prism-shaped blanks for needles. To force out the sap and replace it with oil and wax in the myriad cells of the cane, the bits are put in drip kettles and lowered into vats laden with an oil mixture at 340 degrees Fahrenheit, where they remain 40 hours. Then they are tumbled in barrels containing kerosene and sand, where they get coated and polished.

Each needle is inserted by hand into a cutting machine that snips the point into the familiar diamond form at the rate of 30,000 needles a day.

Magnetic Eyes Needed to Make a Good Impression

A winking, blinking, and winking eye will make a powerful impression, therefore it is of great importance that the organs should be trained to their best condition. The person who would use the power of fascination, says O. H. Brately, in "The Art of Fascination," must acquire a determined look. An empty stare should be avoided, for it can never carry any influence; neither will a fierce and impatient stare fascinate, though it may repel. The magnet-

Value of the Hands and Fingers Provided for by European Insurance Scale

In many cases surgeons have to estimate the chances of saving injured hands and the comparative value of hands and fingers. According to a scale of value furnished by the Miners' Union and Miners' Accident Insurance companies of a European country, the loss of both hands is valued at 100 per cent; the ability to work a living. Losing the right hand depreciates the value of an individual to a worker 70 or 80 per cent, while the loss of the left hand represents from 60 to 70 per cent of the earnings of both hands. The thumb is reckoned to be worth from 30 to 50 per cent of the complete. The first finger of the right hand is valued at 25 per cent.

le gaze must be steady, quiet, penetrating, and determined. In conversation, look into the eyes of the person calmly and steadily, or fix your eyes on the organ of individuality, which is between the eyebrows. Speak all your thoughts clearly and distinctly. Think them as well as speak them.

Pigmies Are Suspected to Be More Ancient Than Any Other Race on Globe

A most interesting puzzle to anthropologists are the pigmies. Apparently of a single racial stock, they are scattered over many parts of the world, and nobody gives a plausible guess as to how their distribution was accomplished.

Wherever found they seem to be the earliest people—veritable aborigines—and all of them are much alike physically, though different somewhat in complexion. They are suspected to be more ancient than any other race now surviving on the globe.

To this race belong the so-called "monkey men" of the mountainous interior of India. Likewise the pot-bellied natives of the Andaman Islands, in the Bengal gulf, who are said to "look like babies all their life." These latter wear their hair in frizzly tufts and adorn themselves with necklaces made from the bones and teeth of dead relatives.

In Madagascar are the Behosy, black dwarfs who were pursued from Java to tree like monkeys. They are so timid that sometimes they die of fright when captured.

Physician Gave Up Work to Become Wood Engraver

The first engraver of wood in America, Alexander Anderson, was born in New York 144 years ago. His father was a Scotchman, the publisher of a newspaper. Anderson first became a physician, but in 1780, after having performed many deeds of heroism fighting the yellow fever epidemic of that year, he abandoned medicine and made engraving his life profession. He died in Jersey City at the age of ninety-four, and a vast number of books illustrated by Anderson vouch for the ability and industry of the pioneer in the art of wood engraving in the new world.

Lavan Proves Big Help to Cards as Shortstop—An Aggressive Player

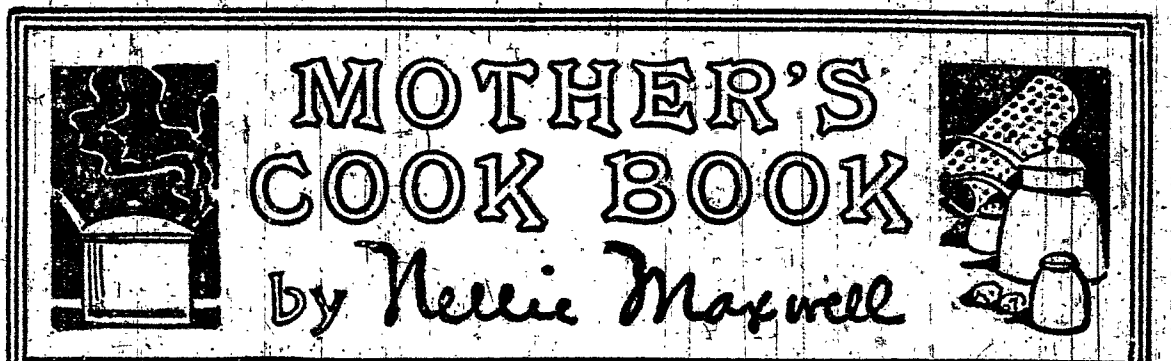

Johnny Lavan has been a big help to the Cards since joining the team. The shuffle of the infield which shifted Hotshy to third, Stock to second and Miller to first, with Lavan at shortstop, improved the St. Louis club considerably, and if the pitching had held up, the Cards doubtless would be higher up than they are today. Lavan is an aggressive player, a fine infielder, and his batting is hard and timely. He and Branch Rickey, manager of the Cards, have long been intimate and when Lavan grew weary of assisting with the Senators, Rickey arranged for him to join the Cards. He was to have figured in a three-cornered deal also involving Davey Robertson and Mike Gonzales, but the transaction was blocked by Barney Dreyfuss.

Grease Spots on Wallpaper

To remove grease spots from wallpaper, put powdered French chalk, wetted with cold water, over the places and let it remain for 12 hours. When you brush off the chalk, if the grease spots have not disappeared, put on more chalk, place a piece of coarse brown paper or blotting paper on it and press for a few minutes with a warm iron.

It matters not how deep entrenched the foe, the battle goes the day how long—Paint not fight on! Tomorrow comes the song.
—M. D. Babcock.

Pies of Various Kinds.
Of all desserts, pastry seems to be the most favored.

Raisin Pie.
Take a cupful of chopped raisins, cover with one cupful of boiling water; mix one tablespoonful of sugar with half a cupful of sugar, the juice and rind of one lemon, a little salt and a tablespoonful of butter. Beat the yolks of two eggs and stir into the mixture. Bake in one crust, cover with a meringue made from the two whites beaten stiff.

Lemon Pie.
Mix one tablespoonful of flour with one cupful of sugar, add one cupful of milk, the juice and rind of one lemon, the yolks of two eggs and two tablespoonfuls of butter. Mix, roll and fold in the well-beaten whites, just before filling the pastry shell. Bake in a hot oven at first, then more slowly to cook the filling.

Cream Pie.
Bake the pastry shell for this pie before filling. Beat the yolks of three eggs, add one cupful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch and two cupfuls of milk. Stir and cook until smooth and the starch is well cooked, then add a teaspoonful of butter and pour into the baked shell. Cover with a meringue using the two whites, brown and cool before serving.

Ripe Currant Pie.
Take one cupful of crushed fruit, one cupful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of water and one of flour, the yolks of two eggs. Cook and fill a baked shell, cover with a meringue of the whites, and brown. This pie may be more quickly made by putting the filling uncooked into an uncooked pastry shell and baking quickly at first to cook the pastry, then slowly to finish cooking the currants. Currants that have been canned fresh by crushing with equal parts of sugar, may be used in this recipe, using a pint can. Pie plant may be used in place of the currants for this pie, making a most dainty dessert.

Blueberry Pie.
Line a deep pie plate with good pastry and fill with two and a half cupfuls of blueberries, mixed with half a cupful of sugar, one-eighth of a teaspoonful of salt and six green grapes with the seeds removed. Cover with a crust and bake nearly an hour. The berries should be dredged with flour.

Consideration gets as many victories as rashness loses. Consistency, then art a jewel. Conspiracies no sooner should be formed than executed. Addition. Constancy is the foundation of the virtues. He keeps watch over a good castle who has guarded his own constitution.

The Loving or Grace Cup.

The loving cup, or grace cup as it is called at English universities, is a survival from the days of the Crusades and the Middle Ages. It is a

WASTE OF MUCH TIME AND MONEY WHEN POOR DRESS MATERIAL IS REMODELED

It is a Waste of Time and Good Dye to Attempt to Color Some Garments.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"It's all very well," said Mrs. Connor, "to talk about making over clothes, but I haven't found that it pays at all."

As Mrs. Stanton leaned forward to answer, the other women of the club leaned back comfortably in their rocking chairs to enjoy more fully this discussion of clothes, the subject so dear to every feminine heart.

"You and I surely have had different results, then. Everything I am wearing today has been made over, or at least changed in some way from its original style, and I am sure this suit and blouse are wearing as well as any I might have bought this spring," Mrs. Stanton answered.

"What makes the difference? Your clothes look wonderfully well and those which I have remodeled have that rather forlorn, made-over look at first, and show worn places and holes before I have worn them more than a month or so."

"Perhaps it is because, while I buy fewer clothes than you, I get better material in the first place and always take better care of them than you do. You know you are always looking for bargains and argue that buying cheap things does away with the necessity of brushing, cleaning regularly, and hanging up your clothes carefully, as I do mine."

"I remember, when I bought this suit, there was another one which I liked almost as well for less money, but I didn't like the material in it. It would look shabby by the end of one year's service. I decided on this one. I wore this one quite steadily for two years and then remade it. This spring, it can easily be worn another year. In the meantime, I have enjoyed wearing the suit because I have all ways felt well-dressed and comfortable when I had it on. The happy combination of good material and good workmanship showed in it and I have been contented to get along without any other clothes. I might otherwise have been inveigled into buying."

"Well, perhaps that is true of your suit, but I doubt whether you have better material in that blouse you have on than there was in the one I attempted to dye. It was mustard colored, done in that gay embroidery such as everyone was wearing a year ago. I was tired and sick of it, though it was not in the least shabby, so I thought I'd color it. As soon as I put it in water, all the different colors used in the embroidery started running and the result is a smeared rainbow effect."

Startling Colors Under Suspicion.
"That brings up a point I intended to mention. We, with limited clothes allowances, can't afford to buy clothes that are in good style, perhaps, but extreme. Startling colors and extreme fashions are not allowed in my wardrobe, for they are always expensive and seldom remain in good taste for any length of time."

"In the library the other day, I found a leaflet, I'm sure you would like," she added, turning to the group as a whole, "for every word in it is valuable. One thing, I remember, was to remodel only when the material has enough wear in it to warrant the necessary work and cost of new material. The librarian told me we could get copies from the home demonstration agent. I would suggest that we get copies for discussion at some future meeting and have the demonstration talk to us about it."

"These women are not more interested in clothes and how to get value received from them than thousands of others are. All will want the leaflet. 'Wise Spending Saves Clothing for the Family,' together with the other shirt leaflets which the United States department of agriculture will send free on request. They will help you solve many questions."

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

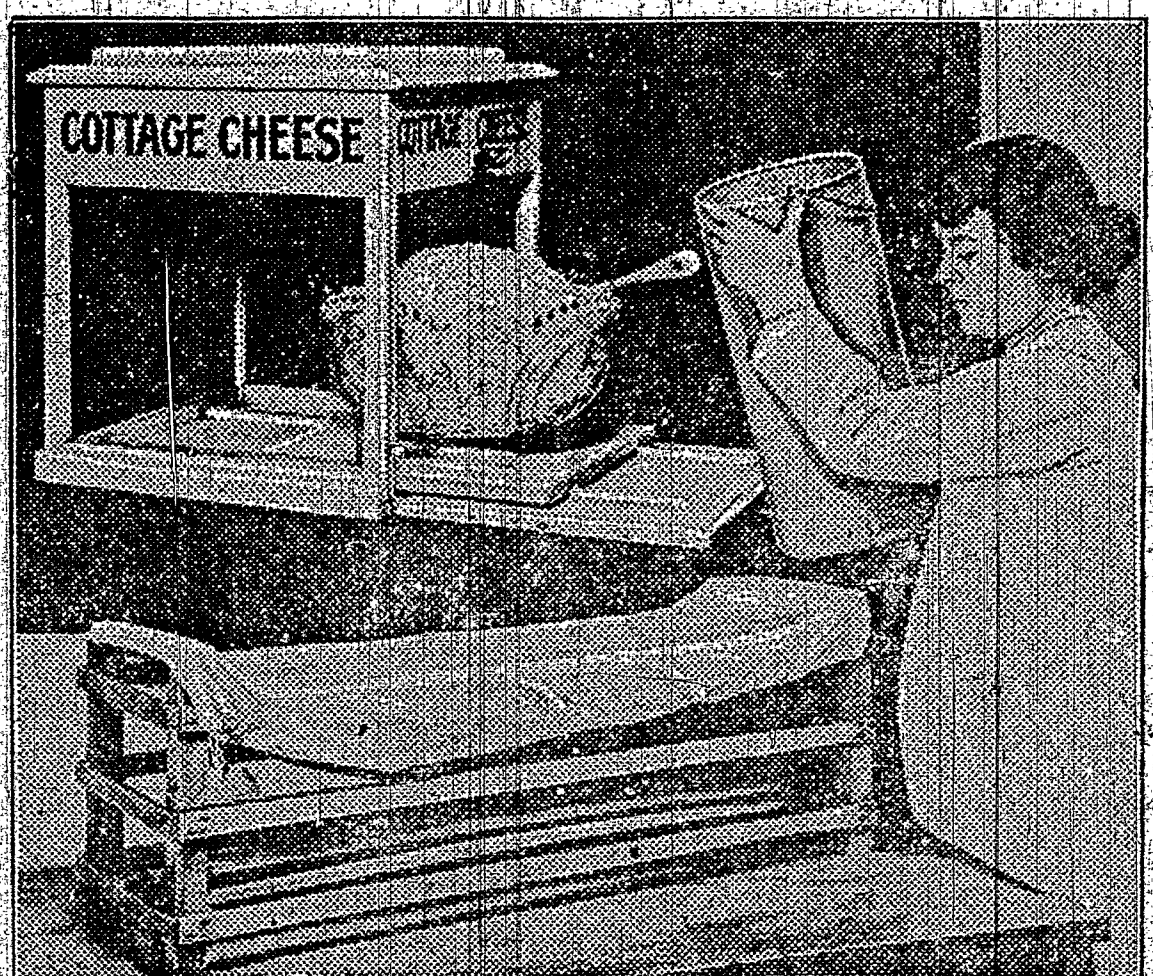

Dry orange peel and grate. This flavors delightfully.

A piece of velvet pasted inside heels of shoes will prevent wear on the stockings.

Have heels built up as soon as they wear off, otherwise the entire shoe soon gets out of shape.

It is said that the flavor of shrimp is improved if boiling water is poured over them shortly before they are to be served. But be sure and immediately drain it off.

GROWING DEMAND FOR COTTAGE CHEESE

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Much cottage cheese was eaten last year, because it saved meat. The campaign to increase its use was carried on in every state. This year, because they have learned to like this dairy product, people want to know more of the manufacture and use of cottage cheese. State-wide work for this purpose is being carried on again in Iowa, Michigan, Kansas, and Utah. In these states the home manufacture of cottage cheese and butter, when conditions warrant, will be encouraged by the state and federal dairy authorities and efforts to increase the general use of cottage cheese will be made. In New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Massachusetts, Connecticut, and Rhode Island, educational work to teach housewives the value of skimmed milk products is being carried on in the cities. The places where the women demonstrators are endeavoring to create a demand are situated where there is usually a surplus of skim milk. Dairy specialists will also help the milkmen in their efforts to manufacture cottage cheese of extra quality.

Ink Spots on Wood.
If you get ink spots on any polished wood surface touch the stains with sweet spirits of nitre, using a small camel's hair brush or a feather. Immediately afterward rub with a cloth dipped in turpentine.

If iodine is spilled the stain may be removed by soaking the article in cold water to which strong ammonia has been added.

When baking fish remember to line the pan with greased paper. There will be no disagreeable sticky remains to wash afterward.

Friends Gave Her Up

Mrs. Hoffman's Recovery From Dropsy a Surprise. She Used Doan's.

"I was in dreadful shape," says Mrs. W. B. Hoffman, 639 Oakley Ave., Hammond, Ill. "There was a swelling pain across the small of my back and when I stooped over, knife-like twinges nearly drove me wild. I had large boils under my eyes and my body bloated badly all over. My feet were swollen, so twice their natural size and the skin looked shiny. When I pressed down, it left a dent there and I knew I was bad off with dropsy."

"My friends and I didn't think I would live very long. I doctored with three different physicians and they didn't help me and I was discouraged. Nobody knows the torture I went through."

"I decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I used three boxes and I was cured. I felt fine. As the swelling went down, my appetite picked up and I was soon perfectly healthy. My color came back and people said I looked as well as ever. Doan's Kidney Pills saved my life."

Skeptical Jury.

An Idaho lawyer tells of a case tried at that state some years ago, on which occasion the judge, an Easterner who desired to display his learning, instructed the jury very fully, laying down the law with the utmost authority. But the jurors, after deliberating some hours, found themselves unable to agree. Finally the foreman asked for additional instructions.

"Judge, here's the trouble," said he. "The jury wants to know if what you told us was really the law or only just your notion."—Harp's.
